A Brief History of Clinton Junior High

In 1867 the original Washington School opened. At a cost of $60,000.00, it was considered at the time to be one of the best in the state. It housed eight grades with eight teachers and had 300 pupils by 1910. In the Fall of 1909 a new high school was opened. It sat where the central administration office is now located. Old Washington was torn down after the new high school opened to make room for a new building that was erected in 1916. This building still stands and forms the central core of the junior high complex. Sometime after 1916, the junior high was moved to the present Washington School building. The maze of structures that now comprise the junior high was built up over a period of years. Eventually, a total of seven buildings were contained in what was called the High School Plant. The building that houses the band rooms and the industrial arts classrooms was the high school manual arts building. The main gym was built in the 1930's and the new section containing classrooms, the office, library and the cafeteria were added in 1956. In that same year the junior high was moved into the "East Building" from its Washington School location. From 1956 to 1971, both the high school and junior high were located in the network of buildings now occupied by the junior high. The entire complex was designated the Clinton Junior High School when the new high school opened in 1971.
